

THE JOSSELYN BOTANICAL SOCIETY OF MAINE will meet this year, July 3-6, at Rowe Ponds Camps, Pleasant Ridge Plantation. These camps are in the midst of the Somerset County forests, 10½ miles northwest of Bingham, which is the nearest village. Woods, ponds and streams are all around, and there is splendid opportunity for collecting and studying the characteristic plants of the region. It is expected that a speaker on forestry will give the principal address. Although this is a Maine society, it has numerous members in other States. Any botanist who wishes to explore this section of Maine during the first week in July, will be heartily welcomed by the Josselyn Society. A descriptive circular giving rates and further details will be sent, on application to the secretary, Mr. A. H. Norton, Portland Society of Natural History, Portland, Maine.
